

THE POWER OF THE FIRST TEACHER

The phrase "knowledge is power" is often attributed to Francis Bacon, from his 1597 work, Meditationes Sacrae.

Bacon's proverb rings true today as knowledge is seen as a form of capital that can be converted into tangible power—economic, political, or cultural.

In a child's life, the first five years are critical in the development of knowledge. By age five, a child's brain is nearly 90% developed, and parents, as the child's first teacher, play the most influential role in shaping that growth. These early years are a time of rapid brain development, emotional bonding, and foundational learning. No one shapes that more profoundly than a parent.

Parents are not just teaches of knowledge —they are a child's first spiritual mentor, shaping how their child perceives God, prayer, community, and moral values. From birth to age five, a child absorbs faith through the relational experiences, prayers, songs, and emotional modeling of the parents.

Thus, when it comes time for a child to attend school, children are best served when teachers and parents share common values and morals. In an ideal world each parent would be able to find just a school for their child.

The Lutheran Center for Religious Liberty advocates for Educational Freedom for parents.

LEARN MORE ABOUT THE LUTHERAN CENTER FOR RELIGIOUS LIBERTY

https://www.lcrlfreedom.org

THE POWER OF THE FIRST TEACHER

The phrase "knowledge is power" is often attributed to Francis Bacon, from his 1597 work, Meditationes Sacrae.

Bacon's proverb rings true today as knowledge is seen as a form of capital that can be converted into tangible power—economic, political, or cultural.

In a child's life, the first five years are critical in the development of knowledge. By age five, a child's brain is nearly 90% developed, and parents, as the child's first teacher, play the most influential role in shaping that growth. These early years are a time of rapid brain development, emotional bonding, and foundational learning. No one shapes that more profoundly than a parent.

Parents are not just teaches of knowledge —they are a child's first spiritual mentor, shaping how their child perceives God, prayer, community, and moral values. From birth to age five, a child absorbs faith through the relational experiences, prayers, songs, and emotional modeling of the parents.

Thus, when it comes time for a child to attend school, children are best served when teachers and parents share common values and morals. In an ideal world each parent would be able to find just a school for their child.

The Lutheran Center for Religious Liberty advocates for Educational Freedom for parents.

FOR RELIGIOUS LIBERTY

https://www.lcrlfreedom.org