

LUTHERAN CENTER FOR RELIGIOUS LIBERTY

The Fight for Freedom

From the “shot heard around the world” that marked the beginning of the Revolutionary War, until today, America and its Constitution has been defended around the world by the millions of citizens who joined the military. Without them, our country with its freedoms, would perish from the earth. The Lutheran Center for Religious Liberty joins a grateful nation in offering thanks to all past and present veterans.

But the fight for freedom isn’t just fought with weapons wielded by trained military, it is also fought with words flung across family dinner tables, neighbor’s fences, public gatherings, and social media. Words become weapons that misinform about inconvenient truths. Words become weapons that mock opponents into silence. Words become weapons that minimize and marginalize groups to silence and destroy them.

Words can be far more destructive than any bomb, for bombs destroy property that can be rebuilt; words destroy people and ideas that can never be restored.

The Lutheran Center for Religious Liberty urges all to use their temporal liberties in the public square, to speak out against innuendo, half-truth, and misleading definitions of words and to speak out for the truth of the Scripture.

Let us speak the truth in love in the public square.
